2009 Award Report

To our friends and colleagues,

Often it is easier to see the impact of many years of growth, investment and work by stepping back and looking at ten or more years of effort. Educators, non-profit leaders, and investment managers often point to their 5 or 10 year track record, as well as looking at the last twelve months. In philanthropy there is merit in looking at cumulative effort as well as this year's highlights, particularly when the world has gone through an unusual period or a period of correction or change. Financially and economically, the world has changed in the last two years, and while the markets may rebound, the terrain has changed. We must now operate with new expectations and a somewhat different approach. Fortunately, despite the economic challenges, The Kohlberg Foundation has continued giving at roughly the same level as our portfolio recovered from the bumpy downturn. We are relatively lucky; we were able to fulfill all of our pledges and to support our longstanding grantees. We trimmed operating costs, but continued to make grants without hesitation.

In 2009, we completed the 12 year cycle of the Vision Fund, and we pay tribute to all of the family and board members who enthusiastically worked to make this effort so worthwhile. The common purpose and action learning that grew out of this collaboration made this work rewarding, and the achievements of the organizations we supported are evidence that much was accomplished. Thank you to everyone who made this possible.

Now, beginning in 2009 and 2010 we will focus more intently on Legacy Giving that has emerged from the lifetime interests of our founders, Jerry and Nancy Kohlberg. In the 2009-10 portfolio we highlight a policy of placing emphasis on core projects where we know the organizations and their leaders very well. We will continue to work with them closely and form partnerships that reflect common values and a real understanding of their strategic plans. Some are old friends and some are new friends, but they are part of a strategy of lifelong giving that has deep roots for the Kohlsbergs. In the last decade, the founders have contributed over $500 Million, both personally and through the Foundation, and this commitment will extend into the next decade as well.
